From tackling loneliness through befriending to young people volunteering in their local communities, the reported community benefits of this fund go far beyond the directly-funded work.

Impact on beneficiaries

"Everyone comes in and tells us what to do, but it's good to be able to say what we want and need." 12-year old

"I have phoned a million people looking for help and everybody says its not something they can help me with. I'm so frustrated that people don't care that I think my daughter is going to die. You are the first person that has listened and I know you get me. That in itself is overwhelming. Thank you."

"Thanks to @DyslexiaScotland for their advice and help with my new diagnosis. Great info on dyslexia on the website. Made me feel human again."

The Yard: The Corra Foundation conferences and meetings have been very beneficial for providing us with extra knowledge on certain topics. For example, the 'Building Unrestricted Reserves' session was incredibly interesting and, as well as aiding us in reserve regulations and information on how to increase reserves, it also provided a great networking tool.

Meeting with our Education Scotland policy officer and Corra Foundation representative has been helpful in developing our work. We feel linked into policy developments and can access their expertise if required.
